Reflection

As compared to A1, this assignment is far from what I expected when beginning the class. My original HTML only website was horrible to look at and did nothing except hold information. Now as my A3 is done, I see the true potential of simple websites using simple code, and it is quite cool. In A1 I had stated that I would like to use this original website design for something in the future or for future opportunities within my career or outside. I do agree with what I said in A1 other than the fact that it would be much more optimized and hold other information that I would update over time when completing new projects and gaining more experience, etc. I enjoyed the final products created by using CSS and JS, and it made it worth using the same code from the prior assignments to see how it developed. The assignments overall were good but long, and I would say there was a lot more writing required than expected, this made them lengthy, but it was not bad at all. This assignment took some time to get down but overall, it was a huge jump from A1, and it was cool to see the result.
